

Screen Readers Can't Read Scanned Documents

When you scan a document, it turns into an image, not actual text. This means that screen readers, which are designed to read text, can't interpret the content since they treat it like a picture.